There are a lot of movies out there but this one is special because this one has a family man who rises from rags to riches, and he does it without compromising his own moral code. There's also a thriller movie with some mystery elements so the whole family can enjoy it together. Its a real life story that took place in India. This movie has a definite message to kids that your dreams can really come true if you work for them and put God first. In this movie you see how Singh puts God first in everything he does which is why he was able to overcome all odds and become one of the richest men in India. Singh said when asked, "One day when I was travelling from Delhi to Amritsar in a train, I overheard two school boys discussing what they would do with the money they would earn in a month's time. One of them wanted to save money and the other wanted to spend it. I asked them how much they would make and they said they made about ten rupees a month. I thought to myself, "With this amount, we can manage with one chapatti for two days at least. My parents had told me that as long as you have a single penny, you should not spend more than what you earn from your work. In those days, I was earning just about enough to buy a few loaves of bread for our daily meals from my job as an accountant at the Imperial Tobacco Company in Lahore." So Singh wrote a letter on a small piece of paper and gave it to his wife. He asked her to give it to their 13-year-old son, Darshan Singh. It said "Son, save at least three-fourths of all your earnings and do not spend more than one fourth for yourself." He used the remaining money to buy a piece of land in Amritsar. Then he built a guest house on it and started charging travelers for staying there. "I was the only one travelling on that route and since my aim was just to help people travel more comfortably and reach their destination without any hassles, I worked hard to maintain my guesthouse," he says. He started the business with just one room but over the years, he purchased more land near his guesthouse, built more rooms and then started charging more people to stay in them. Eventually, his guesthouse became an 11-storey hotel called Hotel Jang. Singh also purchased two other properties in Amritsar—a mill and a factory—and turned them into successful ventures. Today, he is worth $1 billion US dollars! If you want to watch this movie online here is the link: <http://www.movienightsseries>.
